

Cooking Recipes from the Planet Zirconia

Crystal Soup

Crystal Soup is one of the most beloved traditional dishes of Zirconia. Made from ground luminous crystals that retain their sparkle even when cooked, the soup shines faintly in the dark. The dish is spiced with plasma herbs, which produce tiny sparks when stirred, giving the meal a dazzling glow. Locals believe the soup enhances stamina and sharpens the senses, making it popular among explorers before long journeys. Entire feasts are dedicated to its preparation, with families gathering to pass down recipes that vary slightly between regions.

Cooking Recipes from the Planet Zirconia

Lava Cakes

Lava Cakes on Zirconia are unlike anything found on Earth. They are baked within volcanic ovens powered by natural magma streams. The cakes are infused with thermal berries, which retain heat for hours and create a molten core that bursts forth when cut. Travelers often risk burns to taste them fresh from the oven. Legends say that eating one during the Festival of Fire ensures good fortune for an entire year. The cakes are also traded as luxury exports, fetching a premium value in off-world markets.

Cooking Recipes from the Planet Zirconia

Nebula Tea

Nebula Tea is a mystical beverage brewed from vapor clouds collected high in Zirconia's upper atmosphere. When steeped, the tea glows with a faint aura and releases fragrances that induce relaxation and lucid dreams. The Zirconians use it during twilight ceremonies, where participants drink together under the twin moons while singing songs that date back thousands of years. Many visitors claim that even a single sip allows them to see visions of distant galaxies, though whether this is scientific or spiritual remains uncertain.